

Nature and culture

How to deal with the natural space and the transformed cultural space? How can those two realities go together and distinguish themselves from each other? What is a possible harmonious relationship between nature and culture? How we transcend this duality? These are the questions I ask myself and which I'll try to answer within the framework of my work in which the matter and culture takes his own place. Additionally, when this struggle comes to a good end, which is far from always the case, the creation guaranties as well a qualitative harmonic solution in other fields of society.
